

On the Mindset quiz, I scored a 47, placing me in the “strong growth mindset” category. While this lesson didn’t particularly change my current thoughts on mindset, had I taken this class a few years ago, it certainly would have. I used to be pretty set in my ways and stubborn to accept change. I wasn’t in a very happy place at that time. As I’ve grown and experienced more, I’ve come to learn that it is necessary to accept change and criticism. Though it’s still scary, I’ve learned that failure is necessary and that not everything will click immediately. I still struggle with the feelings of failure and disappointment, but I’ve definitely gotten better at it over time. I’m still anxious about learning how to code properly, but there’s a sense of excitement with being able to learn a new skill.
